WRITING

Writing Instructions

Read the two Writing tasks. Choose either Task 1 (Email/Letter) or Task 2 (Essay). Write on only ONE of these tasks.

Once you have chosen your task, darken the circle for “Email/Letter” or “Essay” on your writing answer document.

You should write about one page. You have 30 minutes.

Writing Prompt

Task 1: Email

The local city council is developing a program for children’s activities at the community center in your neighborhood. They want community members to suggest types of activities for the program which would benefit children the most.

- Write an email to the city council to make suggestions and express your opinion. Give reasons to support your ideas.
- Start your email, “Dear City Council Members.”

Task 2: Essay

Celebrities set a good example for teens.

- To what extent do you agree with the statement above?
- Write an essay on whether you agree or disagree with the statement above.
- Include specific reasons and details to support your opinion.

Remember

Once you have chosen your task, darken the circle for “Email/Letter” or “Essay” on your writing answer document.

Choose the best answer to each question and mark it on your answer sheet.

This passage is about pearls.

Pearls are often believed to be a type of gemstone, but in fact they are a product of oysters – a type of mollusk. Oysters have a soft organ called a mantle which produces a material called nacre, also known as mother of pearl, to coat the inside of the oyster's shell. Nacre is a shiny smooth substance made up of minerals and it protects the soft parts of the oyster.

When a grain of sand makes its way inside an oyster's shell, the mantle becomes irritated by its texture and covers it in layers of nacre over time and eventually a pearl is formed. Pearls come in a variety of shapes and sizes, but the largest and most perfectly round pearls are the most valuable. They are generally white, but there are also gray, green, red, blue, and even black pearls.

For many centuries, pearl divers would collect oysters to find pearls and sell them to jewelers. Today, however, there are pearl farms where cultured pearls are produced. The oyster's mantle is cut and a small bead is placed inside to encourage the mantle to produce nacre. Nearly all pearls are produced by these farms, so natural pearls are extremely rare.

Pearls have been used in jewelry for over 5,000 years and archeologists have discovered them among the artifacts of ancient cultures all over the world. They are the only jewels created by living creatures, and the only ones that never need polishing, so it is no wonder people treasure them so highly.

- 75 What is the main purpose of the passage?
- A. to provide information about different types of oysters
 - B. to compare pearls to other types of jewels
 - C. to encourage people to learn more about sea creatures
 - D. to educate readers about how pearls are produced
- 76 What material does nacre consist of?
- A. mollusks
 - B. minerals
 - C. mantles
 - D. mother of pearl
- 77 In the first sentence of paragraph 2, what does the word it refer to?
- A. an oyster
 - B. a shell
 - C. a grain of sand
 - D. a pearl
- 78 According to the passage, what gives a pearl its value?
- A. its color and texture
 - B. its shape and size
 - C. its age and weight
 - D. where it is found
- 79 Based on the information in the third paragraph, what can be concluded about cultured pearls?
- A. They are created using artificial methods.
 - B. They are found by pearl divers.
 - C. They are a different color than natural pearls.
 - D. They are rarer than natural pearls.
- 80 According to the author, why are pearls appreciated so much?
- A. They have historical significance in ancient cultures.
 - B. They are extremely difficult to produce.
 - C. They have been cultured by humans for many years.
 - D. They are unique among the many types of jewels.

This passage is about satellites.

The view of the night sky is becoming less and less clear. The issue of light pollution from the earth's cities is part of the problem, but another contributing factor is the growing number of satellites orbiting the planet. The number is set to rise as companies push to provide more people with Internet access.

The first satellite was launched in 1957, and since then, about 8,000 have been sent into earth's orbit. Currently, satellite companies have plans to launch 46,000 satellites over the course of the next decade – over five times the number in orbit now.

Today, approximately 47% of the Earth's population do not have access to the Internet, and people who live in rural areas are less likely to have an Internet connection than those in cities. SpaceX believes that their network of thousands of satellites, once launched, will be able to solve this problem and ensure that everyone has an affordable high-speed Internet connection around the planet.

While the goal of providing Internet access is an excellent one, the number of satellites is raising concerns. For one, they interfere with researchers' work as they study stars and planets that are in remote parts of the universe. The light that they reflect can cause blurred telescope images and their electronics can interfere with radio waves.

In addition to their effect on research, satellites are also interfering with our ability to enjoy the beauty of the night sky. Stargazers have commented that satellites leave bright white streaks of light in the sky that block the visibility of constellations and planets. The simple pleasure of looking up at a sky full of stars is a luxury we may have lost forever.

- 81 What is the passage mainly about?
- the need to improve telescopes and observatories
 - the ways that satellites are helpful and harmful
 - the best methods for improving internet access.
 - the process of sending a satellite into space
- 82 In paragraph 1, why does the author mention light pollution?
- to illustrate the only source of a problem
 - to argue it causes interference with satellites
 - to give an example of what is limiting views of the night sky
 - to compare it to other types of pollution
- 83 Based on the information in paragraph 2, what can be concluded about satellites?
- There are going to be many more in orbit ten years from now.
 - The number of them in orbit will continue to rise at the same rate.
 - The number of launches will double every year.
 - There will be five major launches in the coming years.
- 84 In the second sentence of paragraph 3, what does the word those refer to?
- satellites
 - areas
 - companies
 - people
- 85 What is the purpose of paragraph 3?
- to describe the effect of satellites on those who like to look at the stars
 - to give reasons why some areas have better Internet access
 - to show the number of problems that the increase in satellites has caused
 - to discuss how to tackle an accessibility problem
- 86 How does the author feel about the satellites orbiting Earth?
- The effort of companies to launch them is understandable.
 - They may have irreversibly changed the way we see the night sky.
 - The way they are being sent into space is controversial.
 - They will help researchers gain a better understanding of the universe.

Navigating the equipment maze ...

Stores sell a wide range of camping gear and accessories, most of it you won't need. So, to make sure you don't get caught in the consumer web, take a look at our hiking guide.

- 1. Clothes: The most important thing when hiking is to keep warm and dry. So, the essential items you need are: rain gear, a warm sweater (even in summer), hiking boots - sneakers simply will not suffice - a warm hat, and plenty of socks.
- 2. Food: Carry lots of snacks, they give more energy than big meals. Lightweight and dried foods should be relied on, not food to cook. Don't make the mistake of carrying too much food, but always carry enough for two days, don't take any chances. Steer clear of fresh foods, they spoil quickly and are heavy to carry.
- 3. Equipment: You'll need a backpack, a tent, a tarp, a compass, a first aid kit in case you get into trouble, and a signal flare. A walking stick is recommended.

The Appalachian Trail

Rachel Downey, Jamestown, ND

After finishing college, my friend Alicia and I decided that we wanted to do something memorable. Backpacking, skydiving, and even bungee jumping were discussed, but we had another idea in mind. I'd heard a lot about the Appalachian Trail, a 2,000+ mile trail from Georgia to Maine. So, last Spring we set off on a six-month trek.

I thought I was prepared but I had no idea what was in store for me. The extreme conditions, from snow to boiling hot, were unreal. I was even stranded without food for two days because of the snow; fortunately, other hikers were willing to share their supplies.

Four months into the journey, Alicia decided she'd had enough. I was tempted to leave with her. There are many challenges that you don't even think of encountering, but along the way you discover just how far you can push yourself. I'm proud to say I completed the trail and I'm now a volunteer, helping others on their life changing journeys.

Questions from Readers:

Q: I don't really enjoy working out in the gym. I feel as though everyone is staring at me and judging my fitness routine. What should I do?

- Jennifer Owen, Hoboken, NJ

A: Well, Jennifer, you have certainly touched on a problem that many people, men as well as women, face when going to the gym. I assure you that 99.9% of the time no one is even paying attention. They are more focused on what they are doing. Secondly, gyms can be extremely busy before and after work hours, so basically between 6-8 a.m. and 5-7 p.m. So, why not try going in between so you miss the crowds. That way, you can enjoy your gym experience without feeling too much pressure from other gym-goers.

Sometimes, people aren't comfortable using gym equipment. However, there are other ways that you can keep fit. Gyms offer so much more than simple running machines. I go to classes, such as Zumba and yoga, with my friends, that way we enjoy exercising without taking it too seriously!

If I were you, I would inquire at your local gym to find out what options there are for keeping fit. You'll find that as soon as you begin to enjoy exercising you can wave goodbye to those insecurities. Good luck!
